

The Philippines schools project 2013

Our wonderful friends!

We keep saying that it is getting too much and we should try to cut back on the number of parcels we send. All our wonderful friends, however, keep donating such magnificent gifts we just have to pass them on. And so it was that seventeen more parcels were despatched in early October. And it didn't end there. We were given an incredible selection of ball point pens after the parcels had gone, which weighed over 10 kilos! We talked to the great folk at Etihad and they gave us an additional luggage allowance so we could take the pens out in our luggage.

Boxes of calculators

Computers and monitors

Boxes of books, sorted for High school and Elementary school

Loaded up and taken to the school

We gave a couple of the classrooms a lick of paint and the outside of the canteen building too!

We
refurbished
one dilapidated toilet

and built two more in the Elementary school

Three new computers for the Elementary school and one for the principal

We were given lots of soft toys it was a joy to hand them out to the kindergarten children

The High school asked for extension side wings to the main covered area, so we got the materials and the work started the finished item

and the students showed their appreciation!

we put some more funds into sporting equipment

The barangay health workers pose with the nebulisers, B.P. monitors and scales we supplied

Brollies and books were requested and we're happy to oblige

The feeding program for the under-nourished is one of the main functions of the BHW's. We bought a new "filing cabinet" for their record-keeping

Ball-point pens, pencils, writing pads
and calculators,
distributed among the various classes

students waiting
patiently in line

It is not unusual for parents to have five,
six or more children
studying at the schools at any one time so something like this can be a really helpful in ensuring they can
all go to the school, without worrying
about the cost of these items

Random choice, and some of the drawer winners for scholarships

We were fortunate to be able to attend a PTA meeting at the High school and an Appreciation day at the Elementary school, which gave us two opportunities to meet and talk to the parents.

PTA day at the High School, using the new projector and screen we bought for them.

The parent's views help us to get a perspective on what they consider is most required at the schools

Jo and I, on behalf of the students of the Botao schools can only say "Thanks very much" for all the help and support we get from so many people over the year. We are so lucky to have friends like you.
